Daniel Bolshoy performs

Daniel Bolshoy, a renowned classical guitarist, was a great crowd pleaser as the St. Lawrence Stage held its first concert starring an international musician. Leaving the theatre following the show, members of the audience couldn't say enough about the talent and stage presence of Daniel Bolshoy. Bolshoy, himself, enjoyed the small venue and great acoustics of the St. Lawrence Stage, as well as the audience's chorus of 'Happy Birthday' in his honour. The stage was tastefully decorated, featuring the works of two visual artists living in the area, Derek and MiSun Hunter. Without the aid of a sound system, Bolshoy's guitar was clearly heard and enjoyed throughout the theatre.

May 3 is the date set for the next big show at the St. Lawrence Stage when Ottawa artist Lynn Miles will perform much of her original and internationally acclaimed music. Tickets are available at Strings and Things in the Iroquois Plaza, Pier 31 in the Morrisburg Plaza, at the Ottawa Folklore Centre or even by email at : booking@st-lawrence-stage.com.

Check out the theatre's website for other shows and workshops. It is found at www.st-lawrence-stage.com.
